Dear Mr. Kobelinski,

On behalf of the Jefferson Park Neighborhood Association and the Jefferson Park Chamber of Commerce, we wish to thank you for bringing back the farmers market to our area for the years 2011 and 2012. It was due to your input that made it possible for our vendors to get a fresh start as a new spot and attractive by waiving their fees. The Copernicus parking lot, with surrounding space, was an ideal location.

The reason for changing the location now to the park itself was a matter of scheduling needs for both the Copernicus Foundation and our vendors. You are now able to offer your facility to other organizations and derive an adequate income.

Again, we will not forget that the Jefferson Park Farmers Market comeback was a success, and you made it possible.

Sincerely,

Eva M. Skowronski

All letters presented here are by individuals, who do not speak for the JPNA.

One of the easiest things to do in life is be lavish in spending other people's money. It's safer to be lavish with money the next generation has to repay because they can't sue when the statute of limitations expires.

If aldermanic "menu money" is funded by bonds, payment for today's benefit from expenditures is passed on to the next generation – it is not a current "line item" budgeting expense from current property taxes. When I asked at the alderman's office, I was told that menu money is funded by 20-year General Obligation bonds (not as a current "line item" expense).

For me, "menu money" – even with participatory budgeting – is in the category of obviously obfuscated manipulation of expenditures. This is a round-about way of saying, "Politics as usual" is spending borrowed money (or manipulated money: think T.I.F.'s) in a way to get re-elected for the 'vision' of the individual."
